I contacted the Muskogee Police Department and asked them to send someone out to place orange warning cones around the area until it can be repaired.

Think about this...

A vehicle traveling 35 MPH that suddenly drops into a pothole this size can:

- * Blow out one or more tires.
- * Bend or crack expensive wheels.
- * Damage suspension and steering components.
- * Cause a driver to lose control.
- * Force a vehicle into oncoming traffic or off the roadway.
- * Lead to a serious crash, especially for motorcycles or smaller cars.

Please use extra caution if you're in the area tonight, and if you know someone who travels North 24th Street, share this post so they see it before it's too late.

Has anyone else hit this pothole or noticed others around Muskogee that are becoming dangerous after all this rain? Drop the location in the comments so we can help warn other drivers.

Stay safe, everyone.

 CAUTION! CAUTION! CAUTION!

If you travel North 24th Street heading north just before Harris Road, SLOW DOWN!

A local woman struck a massive pothole tonight that was completely hidden by rainwater. The impact caused major damage to her vehicle, and it may even be a total loss.

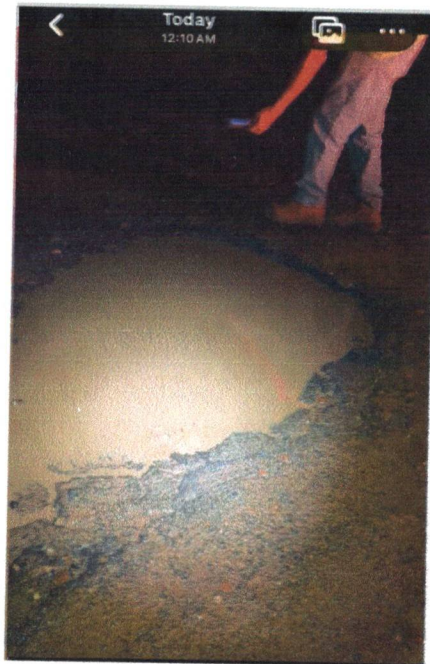

I drove out to check it myself, and as you can see from these photos, my truck tire sank over halfway into the hole. You can't tell how deep it is because it's completely camouflaged by muddy water.

I contacted the Muskogee Police Department and asked them to send someone out to place orange warning cones around the area until it can be repaired.

Think about this...
